

Leave Indiana's "no-call" law alone. It is working great as it is currently written. We have gone from being bothered every single night (including Sundays!) by approx. 4 phone calls down to about three a month. We appreciate being left alone at home. Your home should be a haven to escape from the outside pressures, not a market place for companies and organizations you want nothing to do with. Our Indiana law is written so well and enforced well enough that many people in neighboring Illinois recently called into a local news radio show and asked how they could get a law like it in their state.
